The combination of students, faculty, and activities helps to make Barton County Community College a winner. Without each aspect of college life BCCC students would have unfulfilling and worthless experiences. The willingness of the faculty to do all it can to help students makes academic achievement possible. The students make friends in their years at BCCC that last a lifetime. While classes and hours of studying are important, the clubs, organizations, and extra curricular activities make school more enjoyable and help fill the students' free time.

Students, staff, administration faculty, academics and activities at BCCC join together to make

Freshmen participate in orientation

By Tina Herrera

OK, let's get this straight. Classes haven't even started yet, it's Friday and we still have to get up early? And Saturday, too?

The spirit of orientation filled the air as students found out about their weekend plans. Even though many students were reluctant to attend the orientation sessions at first, many of them said the sessions were informative and even entertaining.

"Orientation made me aware of issues I had never thought of, like date rape." Tara Miller, Oberlin freshman, said.

The courses informed students about subjects ranging from student rights, to managing stress, to getting along with others.

Two guest speakers were present to talk to students. James Boyer, Ph.D., Manhattan, spoke about the moral and ethical concerns of the students and Dr. Donna Sweet, Wichita, spoke about health issues, like AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

"Opening session set the mood, it was the most exciting we've had in the last few years. The students felt more a part of BCCC with student leaders and faculty. This is also the first time we've had team leaders." Sandra Murray, coordinator of the Isbell M. Wesley Center, said.

Many sessions were offered, including: Personal Protection/Date Rape, Chemical Dependency, and Cross Cultural Communications.

The Personal Protection/Date Rape session, presented by Barton County Sheriff Jim Daily, made the incoming students aware of the growing problem of sexual assault on college campuses.

The cross cultural communications session, presented by Bill Cordes, gender equity facilitator, showed the students some ways to get along with one another successfully.

Through a game of "Simon Sez", a skit about racial tension, and many other lessons about daily encounters with others, Cordes gave the students information about the human perception of life.

After the half day of orientation Saturday, a Las Vegas night started and students were given $50,000 each in play money. They used this money to gamble and bid on prizes including a VCR, a microwave, a Nintendo, and smaller prizes such as T-shirts, watches, tapes and gift certificates. The students attended a dance on the circle drive and watched a fireworks display.

Shelly Buhler, coordinator of admissions said, "We'll try to expand the development of personal relations with team leaders and students. Possibly we'll get more team leaders and smaller groups."

"The outstanding support on the part of the faculty and staff contributed greatly to the program." Dean of Student Affairs Mary Misegadis, said.

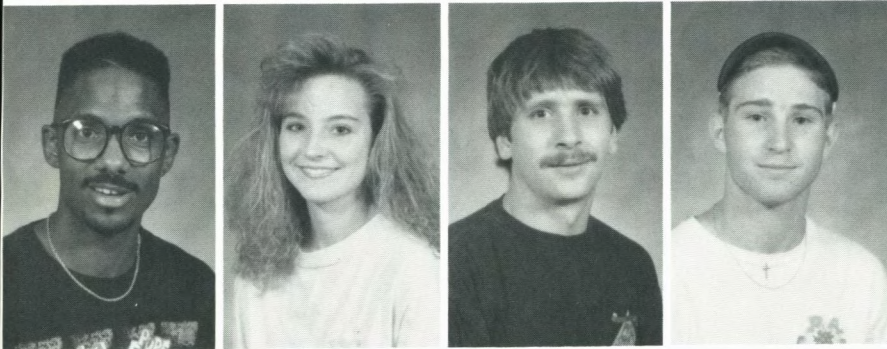

Some students also voiced their opinions about orientation. "I liked the team leaders and how they got everyone to participate. There were too many early mornings, but, in all, the seminars were interesting." Lori Maneth, Otis freshman, said.

Orientation '91 is over, but the memories, whether pleasant or not, will remain. Many will recall the student who was hit in the head by a flying plastic disk, or falling asleep in the first early session or meeting a special friend.

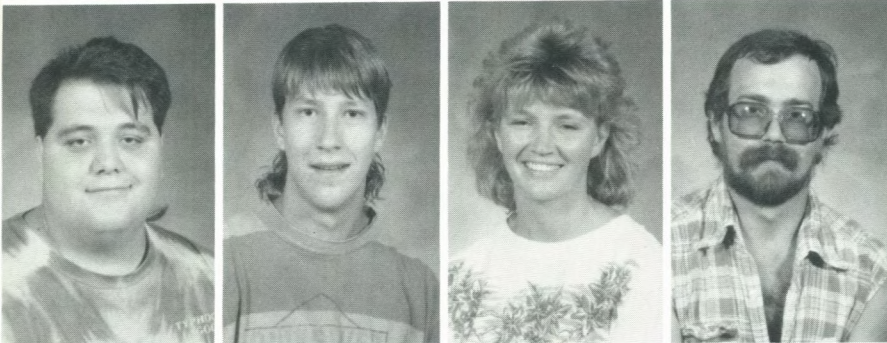

As BCCC continues its commitment to the premise that students need information in addition to what they get in the classroom, orientation will be a requirement for incoming freshman in the hopes of helping them become successful community college graduates.

Soldiers return to campus

By Lynnette Wilkening

Last year the U.S. armed forces entered Kuwait to push out Iraqi forces and to enforce an earlier deadline set by the United Nations. This war was one of the shortest in history. However, just as we thought we were through dealing with Sadaam Hussein it appeared we were going back for round two.

Troy Koehene, Great Bend freshman, Dave Pearson, Great Bend freshman, Shane Palmer, former Barton County Community College student, and Jolene Tustin, student health nurse were four people from BCCC who were shipped to the Persian Gulf War.

The students were allowed to drop or take incompletes in their classes with no charge and Tustin took a leave of absence. Pearson and Koehene were sent to Ft. Riley and then later deployed to Saudi Arabia in September with their Great Bend reserve unit specializing in water purification. They returned to the United States seven months later.

Tustin's tour of duty began in January and came to a close in May. She said, "I thought my life was probably falling apart, I never thought I would be leaving my family. You just never think it could happen but I knew what could happen when I joined the reserves." Koehene, Pearson, and Tustin have returned to BCCC to pick up their lives. Palmer did not return to campus.

For a while, there seemed a chance the United States would go back to settle disputes about nuclear weapons. If this had happened these soldiers' lives would be changed again.

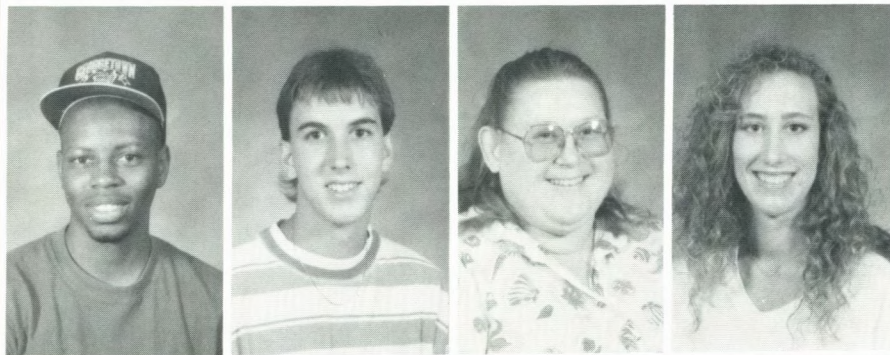

When Pearson left he thought he would only be gone for three months, so he took incompletes in all of his classes. This ordeal has set him back a year in schooling but he still plans to become a teacher. He said, "Most of my friends are already at four-year schools so I feel kind of left out, but I'm making new friends." If Pearson has to go back over he said he would continue his education at BCCC when he gets back.

When Tustin was called to serve, she was replaced temporarily at BCCC by a nurse working part-time for the school. She said if she had to go back BCCC would probably call back the same nurse if she did not already have another job.

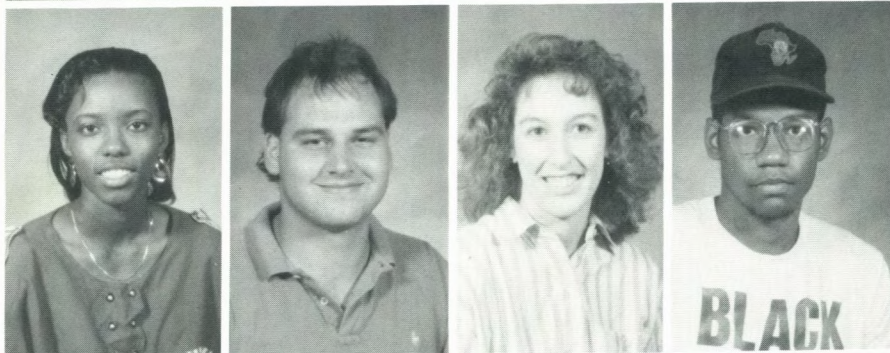

When troops left the first time the U.S. support was overwhelming. Yellow ribbons were worn and decorated homes and yards. Both Tustin and Pearson said if we go to war again, it will go quicker than before.

Tustin said she and her family do not think about the possibility of going back much, but if she does have to go, her family will get along just fine.

Nobody knows yet what is going to happen in the Persian Gulf but if troops are sent back our soldiers at BCCC said they are ready to serve the country.

Butler's back: for more than one reason

By Trevor Rolfs

Gene Butler, Wichita sophomore, came to campus with several goals in mind. He came to Barton County Community College to succeed in both academics and athletics.

As he began his second year at BCCC, he brought with him the reputation and expectations of being one of the best point guards to ever play at BCCC.

Coming off a season where the Cougars were so close, Butler said he is even hungrier to be a National Champion this year. "Last year was a great experience for me. Winning the Region VI crown was like winning a state championship. I really like this game."

Last year Butler broke the all time single season assist record at BCCC with 200 assists. He plans to break the career assist mark here at Barton this year. The mark stands at 304 total assists set by Cliff Moss in 1980-82 seasons. "It would be nice to break the record before Christmas break," Butler said.

The 1990-91 season helped Butler grow as a player. Although he struggled at the beginning of the season, he had mastered the point guard duties by seasons end. Butler averaged 5.5 assists per game last year and just under 5 points a game. He said he hopes to average near 10 assists a game in the 91-92 season. Butler has high expectations for the team. He said this years Cougar basketball squad could even be better than last year because of the family atmosphere and friendships that have already been established within the team.

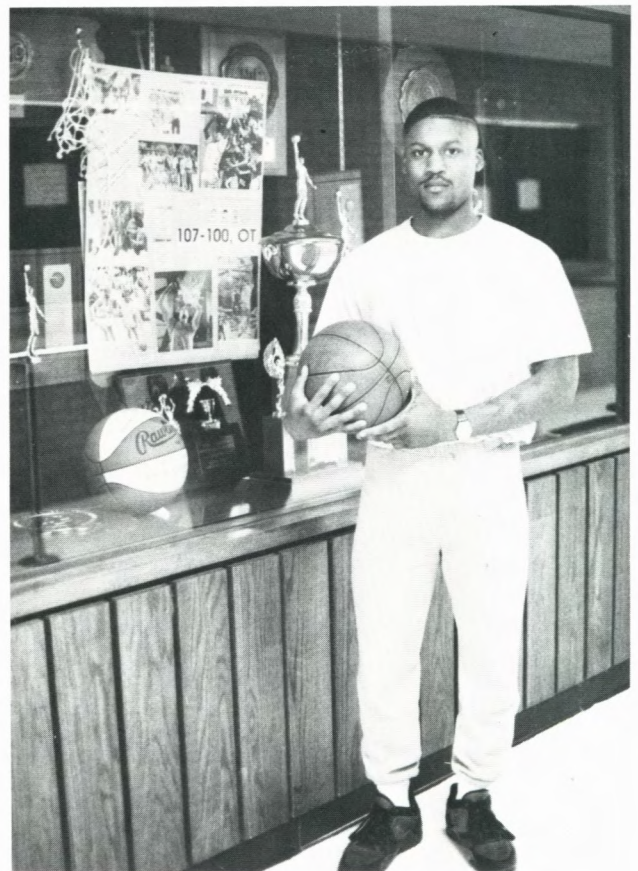

Most people recognize Butler as the mens basketball point guard. There is more to Butler than just basketball. He carries a 3.0 GPA and loves to be friendly with peers and people on campus. He also works as a resident assistant in student housing. He said, "Being able to communicate and have friendships with the administration and staff here at BCCC means a lot."

Butler said he not only came here to be a ballplayer, but also to get a good education. He said his main goal is to graduate on time, not to break the assist record. Butler said he does not have any idea where he will play ball next year, but he does want to get the sheepskin and transfer to a Division I program.

As Butler studies, works as a resident assistant in student housing, and plays on the basketball team, he progresses toward the goals he set for himself when he began his college education.

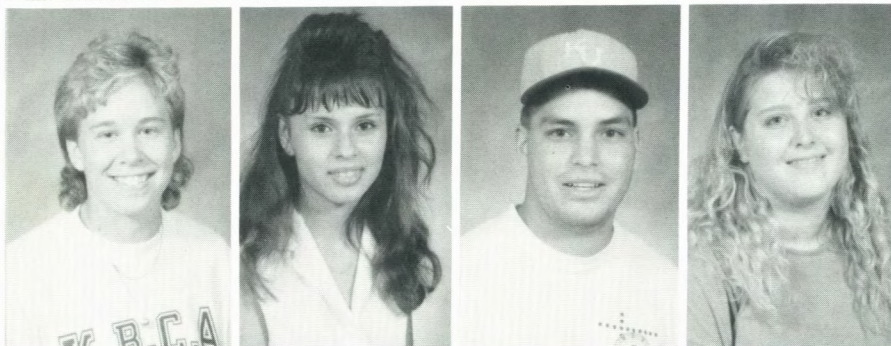

Gene Butler, Wichita sophomore, said he reminds himself everyday in practice how sweet the national tournament really is. (Photos by Stella Ochs)

Piper Green, Clay center freshman, played the saxophone with the Up With People band on a year-long world tour.

BCCC student performs around the world

By Lea Johnson

For most eighteen-year-olds just out of high school, touring the world is not a consideration. But for Piper Green, Clay Center freshman, a world tour became an option when she became involved in a performance group that allowed her to do and see more in a year than most people do in a lifetime.

Green became part of a service group called Up With People in July 1990. Out of 10,000 people interviewed, Green was one of the 600 accepted. To be a part of the group Green said the selected applicants had to have outgoing personalities and strong leadership qualities. When she received her acceptance letter, she only had two weeks to get ready to leave the country for a year's tour. The group met in Tucson, Ariz., before starting their world tour.

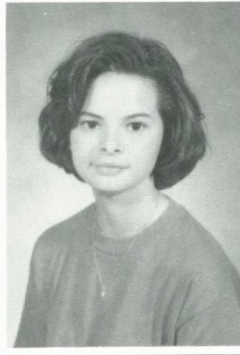

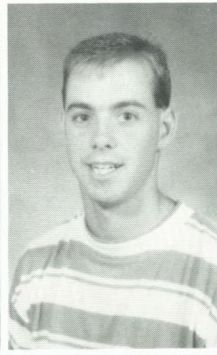

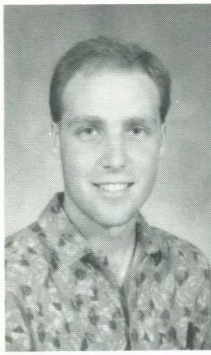

According to Green, Up with People tries to create understanding among people of all nations. Performances to draw audiences included dancing and singing some songs in native languages. Green started the tour playing the saxophone and she eventually became a dancer. Each song had a theme dealing with issues such as gang violence and indian relations.

During their stay in each country, the performers participated in community service projects and spoke to people from prisons, scout troops, schools, and other organizations. Green said she helped paint the basement of a hospital, clean rivers, and made cookies with women from a nursing home.

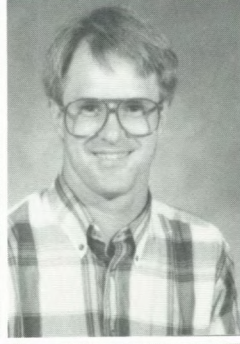

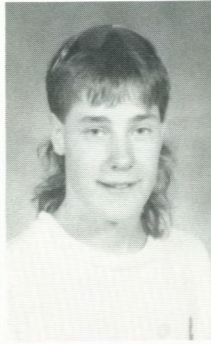

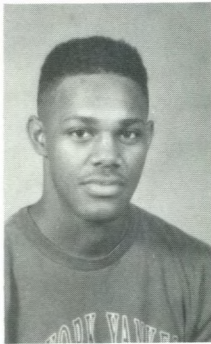

She visited approximately ten countries. Some of these included Belgium, England, Ireland, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Russia, and Canada. She was selected to go to Belgium a month early to promote Up With People and secure performance dates. She spoke on more than ten radio stations and talked to many groups. In England the group performed for Prince Edward. "The highlight of the year was a performance in Sweden at the World Soccer Tournament before over 50,000 people. I was too excited about the crowd and media to even be nervous," she said.

During the year Green stayed with 96 host families. She stayed on an indian reservation, in an all girls catholic boarding school, and a religious colony. In Belgium her host family lived in a bakery where she helped in the mornings. She also lived on a boat for a while with her host in Denmark. Most of her host families did not speak English. She said, "Even though we spoke different languages, it was still easy to communicate and learn from the people I stayed with." Although most of her time was spent on community service and performances, she said she had some evenings and two days a month to spend with her host family and to do what she wanted.

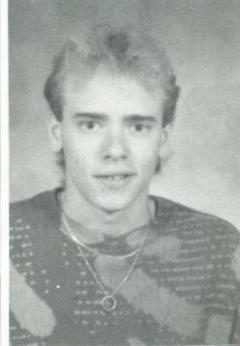

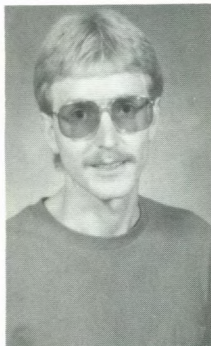

"The best part of my experience was meeting so many new people and learning about new cultures and lifestyles. Even though everyone is different and unique, people are people."

Policy makes crime information available

By Robin Monroe

Who do you see in the cold winds on the Barton County Community College hill in two feet of snow jumping car batteries, trying to open locked car doors, or pushing someone out of a snow drift? BCCC security officers.

BCCC security personnel make sure all buildings, property, and all campus areas remain safe. Don Beers, a BCCC alumnus, has been with security for 11 years and director for five years. He and six other men work to make the campus secure. These men include Paul Woff, Helmuth Woff, John Ney, Lee Burrell, Ken Eiland, and Charles Batman.

Security is also responsible for enforcing campus drug and alcohol policies. Drugs are not a problem Beers said, but if the situation would come up, the information would be sent to the Sheriff's Department and the problem would be handled through them. If any alcohol is discovered, it is confiscated. "We try to make the students pour it out themselves," Beers said.

A campus policy initiated last year in accordance with the Campus Crime Awareness Act and the Campus Security Act of 1990, reports that all campus statistics and campus crime security procedures in addition to graduation rates are to be reported to the Department of Education.

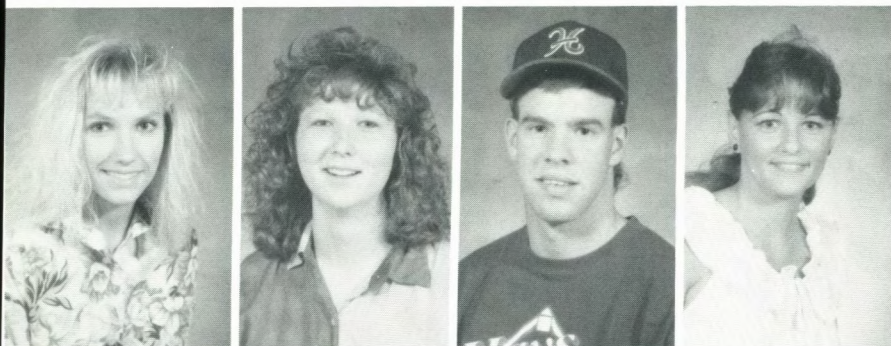

Colleges must distribute this information to students, employees, and prospective students or employees every year. These reports must include campus policies concerning procedures for reporting criminal actions and the institutions response to such reports and policies regarding alcohol and drug abuse and a description of any substance abuse programs.

Colleges are to provide information on violent crimes such as murderer, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, and motor vehicle theft, and nonviolent crimes such as liquor law violations, drug abuse violations, and weapon possession.

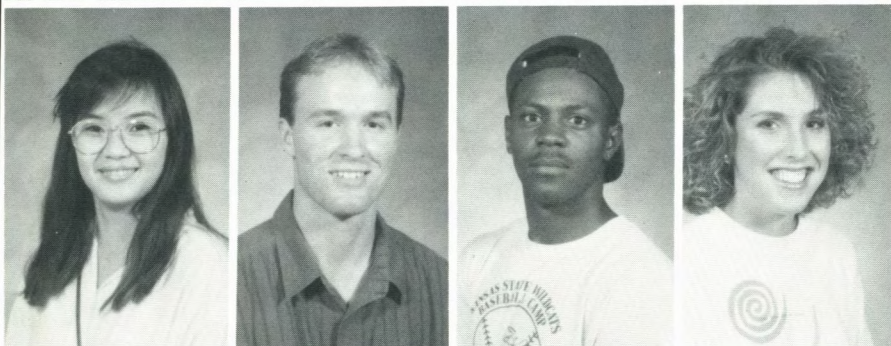

These acts allow the colleges to tell the result of disciplinary proceedings conducted by the institution to the alleged victims of those crimes.

Tom Moorhous, political science instructor, says he finds his office has a very relaxing atmosphere. He does not have a desk as most instructors do. He works on a lap-top computer and prepares for classes from a comfortable position on his divan. (Photo by Stella Ochs)

Instructor tries to tell it like it is

By Heidi McClain

He is one who expresses ideas and opinions in anyway possible to get his point across. Some people may think his teaching philosophy is inappropriate or unsuitable for the students at Barton County Community College. Instead of teaching only what text books say, he says he attempts to tell who really runs America.

Kelly Dennis, Rose Hill sophomore said, "I think he's a teacher for the kids. He's really a good teacher, and I have learned a lot in his class."

Jennifer Proffitt, Ellinwood sophomore, said, "He relates to people well and, he relates to the way his students think."

For his students Tom Moorhous, political science instructor, could very well represent BCCC's "Dead Poet's Society."

Moorhous was born in western Kansas in 1956. He said when he graduated from high school he was functionally illiterate. Starting off his career at Colby Community College, he recieved training to become a "real" college student. He received a bachelor's degree in Art, his first love, from Fort Hays State University.

He landed his first teaching job in Osborne, where he taught for one year. He said he resigned because he was, "fed up with the adminstration and politics." As a result of seeing how politics seemed to greatly influence how schools are run, he developed an interest in political science.

In 1981 he was hired to be a government teacher and women's softball coach at BCCC. Later he gave up athletics, because he said it was hurting his teaching. Moorhous said, "I could not do both all the time."

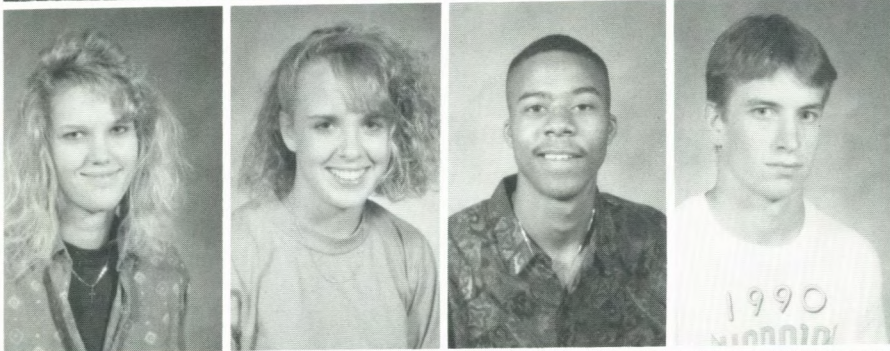

Moorhous also taught a sociology class in 1986 and 1987. In 1989 he took a sabbatical to work on a master's degree in sociology. However he said his teaching comes first and his personal grades second. He said people may wonder why students do so well in his classes. Some may think he's just easy, but Moorhous said, "I have made myself one of the best teachers on this campus, because when I came to BCCC I was barely a song and dance man."

He said there are still life goals that he has not fulfilled. He wants to complete a Ph.D. in either Political Science or sociology. He said he has set a personal goal to find out who really killed President John F. Kennedy.

Moorhous said he was standing on chairs before Robin Williams ever was. He tries to fill his students heads with knowledge. Maybe he really does represent BCCC's "Dead Poets Society."
